

Wiederhold Genealogy information

Introduction

This work was motivated by a desire to make earlier work by Alfred Wiederhold, who worked for over thirty years to create a comprehensive genealogy for Wiederholds anywhere in the world. He published about a dozen copies. Gio Wiederhold has been working on achieving and expanding on Alfred Wiederhold's vision. Now the internet provides an opportunity for expanding and sharing the information with a much broader audience. All of Alfred's source documents are now available on-line.

However, these documents require some effort and cross validation to become as easy to use as the genealogies available on public web sites. Background, motivation, scope, limits, and methods I used to create a comprehensive Wiederhold tree are described in Genealogy Methods, including the contents and format chosen, as well as the assumptions made. A score of related documents and stories are now available and contributions are welcome.

The current Wiederhold Genealogy

A searchable tree, as of 28 December 2019 covering All Early Wiederholds is now available on-line using the WebTrees package available on GoDaddy. That tree is intended to include all known Wiederholds born before 1800, much of their early family, and many of their descendants, especially those that emigrated from Germany to the United States, Chile, and the Netherlands.

The working version of 1 December 2020 contains 44,811 related persons. I hope to publish it on-line in Wiederhold.org in January 2021.

In February 2020 it had 7469 Wiederholds and von Wiederholds, 145 Wedderolds, a name used 1200-1400, 159 Wiederholts (mainly in the US midwestern states), 96 Wetterholts (in Lorraine, an area sometimes French, sometimes German since 1667) and from them 70 Weatherholts (in Michigan since 1869), 38 Wiederholdts (a Dutch branch started before 1753), 33 Wiederholz' (mainly in central Germany), 14 Widerholds, and 9 Wetterolds. Counts of those names and other variants are periodically updated in the story about Name Changes.

Isolated instances of different name spellings have been changed to be consistent with their relatives. Descendants with radically different names, as Cederhout (Netherlands as of 1753) and Woodrow (US as of 1914) are not included. Spouses and maternal ancestors are included, as far as feasible. I try to show all spouses and children of Wiederhold daughters, but rarely follow their descendants. The tree also includes many rulers that affected their lives.

Substantial information on the earliest Wiederholds - or Wedderolds - was not available to Alfred Wiederhold. In 1986 the Warburger Stamtafeln were published and the include data for Wedderold from 1220 to 1400. Many entries from the Warburger Stamtafeln are related to Alfred's entries in the genealogy tree. Many more provide linkages to yet earlier relatives in maternal lines.

Yet earlier linkages are presented in the story about the founding of Hessen and the origin of the Counts of Hessen, with references to their Wikipedia entries. A contemporaneous map is included there.

Perusing the Wiederhold Tree

For the tree itself public software, Webtree, is used in Wiederhold.org. Because of privacy rules the public file replaces all persons that might be living with the name "Living Wiederhold". That means that in order to find your own ancestors you have to search for the name of a dead relative using a complete name in the General Search box, say "Theodore August Wiederhold". Often the exact spelling of that name is uncertain. With Webtree's Advanced Search option one can find ancestors based on incomplete data. Once you find a person related to you, you can navigate up and down, using family information shown on the right-hand side, create charts, etc. Since so many Wiederholds gave their children similar names, has Johannes and Heinrich there will often be multiple similarly named Wiederholds with the same year-of-birth. Here the name of the spouse, the date of death, and the locality can distinguish them. I try to list the maiden names of all spouses, since confusion there easily leads to misassignments of children.

Most entries obtained from the original Alfred Wiederhold will have a source entry showing the file names given in the Sources section of Wiederhold.org. Many others refer to public genealogy sites, as MyHeritage, Ancestry, Geneanet, Geni, Stamboom, and Wikitree. Well known people may have an entry in one of the Wikipedias. Some Wiederhold biographies appear in the Deutsche Biographie.

Please let me know of any problems or errors by email to Gio Wiederhold. I will correct them in my private version and update this public version as needed, perhaps every three months. There will always be some errors in such a large file.

Further material

We showed already a general map of Germany to show where most German Wiederholds were located. Below we show a map of the prime area, northern Hessen, with its major town, Frankfurt am Main at the base.

Transformations

I maintain the data using McKiev Ancestry Software, keeping files in their .ftm format and backups in compressed .ftmb format. I can make files in those formats available. To use other genealogy software these files are first saved in a standard interchange format: GEDCOM. I can make the genealogy file available in that format as well. A simple display application for GED files on my iPhone is GedView. The version now publicly available on Wiederhold.org uses WebTrees, available at GoDaddy.com, the manager of the Wiederhold.org site.

I found out that date ranges are not handled correctly when transformed. I don't know if the failure is in the translation into or from GEDCOM format. The data has also been moved by Ruud de Rooter into Aerdvaer, free software from the Netherlands. That software has some great features, as proper handling of names with prefixes, as 'van Oranjen' and computation of multiple relationships.

A July 2015 version of the Wiederhold tree was made publicly available on MyHeritage. That version has not been updated, has known errors, and does not have the earlier Wedderhold data. It also contains much information on Gio's mothers' family, 'Tuybens', which I currently maintain separately. The Wiederhold tree on Wiederhold.org only contains Gio's direct ancestors on the Tuybens side.

Other publications

I have obtained or borrowed a number of publications that have validated and extended the Wiederhold Genealogy as well as the Tuybens ancestry. Major sources have been boldened. The family books for Kefferhausen and Dingelstädt have each about 1500 Wiederhold entries, but many are duplicates.

Internet sources containing genealogical information are very useful since they allow search. Like anything on the Internet, the data have to be used with care.

- Wikipedias in English, German, French and Spanish'
- Website for Ancestry.com. I receive periodically suggestions for updates from them. They tend to provide pointers to the source documents. Ancestry also supports the Genealogy programs on Public Radio. My mother's genealogy appears there as TuybensReduced, together with my personal direct ancestors. Much of its contents was produced and documented by my cousin, Loes van Beuge-Davis (1936-2021).
- Website for Geneanet \(used by Ruud de Ruiter\).
- Website for the Geni World Family Tree.
- Website for MyHeritage, maintained by the Church of Latter-day Saints, with access to their library of published family genealogies. I receive periodically suggestions for "Smart" matches from MyHeritage, but always validate them, because misspellings tend to lead to duplicate entries. I used MyHeritage for an early version of the Wiederhold family tree, but am not maintaining it.

A recent (2020) update of MyHeritage encourages users to add substantial subtrees to their genealogies with a single click, without a means to look at the individual entries. That is likely to make its contents less reliable. Children with alternate spellings become routinely replicated and redundant subtrees are the effect.

- For content in the Netherlands the Stamboom forum is very useful. It advertises itself as Het communicatieplatform voor stamboomonderzoekers: fora, discussiegroepen en weblogs gebundeld. Voor genealogen, door genealogen!
- The web site for Wikitrees, a site with many active and helpful participants.
- The documents available on the GenWiki website

While I use all of them, I am not in full control of their contents and not at all of their content management. Neither can I afford to maintain a complete and correct copies of an up-to-date Wiederhold genealogy there. They all do provide useful references to source publications.

References for specific individuals appear in their stories, specifically for Konrad Wiederhold \(1598\); Andreas Wiederhold \(1731\); and Bernard Wilhelm Wiederhold \(1757\). Jürgen Wiederhold (*1940) donated relevant books from Alfred Wiederhold's library in July 2022.

Entries in my genealogy should always be identified with the source, and the specific location within a major source in the field labeled Alfred W., my primary source. If source information in an entry is missing please check the entries for the nearest relatives.

Acknowledgements

Many people have helped with aspects of this research:

- Ruud de Ruiter in Switzerland, who has not only supplied data, but also subjects data that I entered into my tree to rigorous checking.
- Rüdiger Kruse in Germany who focuses on data from Heuthen in the Eichsfeld and their US descendants. He has also published a series of books focusing on US descendants from other towns in the Eichsfeld area..
- George Molenkamp in The Netherlands, who has researched the ancestors that went to the Indies.
- Ewald Frankenberg, Weilerswil, Germany who was able to supply data extracted from church books in the Eichsfeld region.
- Marco Born, who maintains a beautiful genealogy site for the Ziegenfuss family, which includes many Wiederholds from the Eichsfeld region.
- Martin Heddergott, who has helped in figuring out the complex relationships of the Eichsfeld Wiederholds.
- Gary Weatherholt, who has done extensive work on the Weatherholt and Wetherhold families, and published their genealogy (see reference above). He has provided updates beyond what has been published for inclusion in the Wiederhold genealogy to appear in early 2021.
- Carina Wetherhold, who collected and provided data via ancestry on the US branches that changed their names to Weatherhold, Weatherholt, Wetherhold, Wetherholt, and similar variations, easier to use and pronounce in the US.

- Alwin Wiederhold, now living in the UK, born in the Netherlands, and educated in South Africa. He provided links to South-African and Ceylonese branches, as well as a story about the ubiquitous name John Wiederhold.
- Gregory Wiederhold helps maintain the Facebook Wiederhold Ancestry site.
- Jürgen Wiederhold (1935), my cousin in Germany, who has helped to collect German source data.
